Revision summary

1. We made changes to the structure of our files (splitting them into folders), and added the missing Data folder. Besides this, we edited our functional and non-functional requirements.
2. Without the Data folder, it was impossible to get a good idea of the raw material we were working with. Further, without it, we had no licensing information or any other basic details about the data. Our functional and non-functional requirements were vague and lacked the specificity that would make them useful in fulfilling the needs of our users.
3. We added the Data folder and rewrote our requirements to make them more applicable to our user stories and personas. Now specific requirements refer to specific subsets of users, and we assure that by fulfilling them, we fulfill the wants and goals of our users.